Eurofins Good Manufacturing Practices for Dietary and Food Supplements

Eurofins dietary and food supplements GMP certification combines the American National Standard for dietary and food supplements, NSF/ANSI 455-2 with best practices for management and segregation of goods and materials intended for global distribution to differing regulatory regimes. This program assures compliance to United States regulations and best practices for dietary and food supplements products, and is normative to the NSF/ANSI 455-2, a widely recognized standard accepted by many retailers. Tailored for a global supply chain this GMP certification leverages Eurofins global-local capabilities to provide a uniquely valuable compliance solution.

GRMA - Global Retailer and Manufacturer Alliance

Based on the NSF/ANSI 455 suite of GMP standards for dietary and food supplements, cosmetics and over-the-counter drug (OTC) manufacturing, the ANAB accredited GRMA scheme aims to enhance consistency and harmonization of expectations for GMP compliance across the food, healthcare, and cosmetics industries. This program is not only a GMP quality management system audit, but a detailed, scope-specific process certification. The dietary and food supplements GMP scheme is the only GFSI benchmarked, accredited certification to NSF/ANSI 455-2 in the world, offering the greatest coverage for meeting multiple retailer requirements with one certification.

SSCI - Supplement Safety and Compliance Initiative

Created in 2017 through collaboration between retailers and manufacturers, and benchmarked against domestic and international standards, SSCI GMP certification is designed to enhance consumer confidence in products. Focused on improved traceability, and identification of dietary and food supplements ingredients, this program assures authenticity, safety, and GMP compliance throughout supply chain. This program is sponsored and adopted by numerous retailers and brands.
